

Springfield Update – Primary Election

Voters in Illinois went to the polls on Tuesday to choose their party candidates for the upcoming November elections. The General Election will be held on Tuesday, November 3, 2026. Winners of Tuesday’s contest are highlighted below in yellow.

United States Senate

This year, Illinois voters will elect a new United States Senator to replace longtime Democratic US Senator Dick Durbin, who is retiring. While Illinois’ Democratic Primary featured 10 candidates, the true battle was between Congressman Krishnamoorthi, Lt. Governor Stratton, and Congresswoman Robin Kelly. While the Republican primary featured six candidates, the Party failed to recruit a strong, well-known candidate.

Krishnamoorthi led in fundraising, while Stratton, who has served as two-term Governor JB Pritzker’s Lt. Governor since 2019, benefited from Pritzker’s endorsement and cash infusion from the Illinois Future PAC, which ran pro-Stratton ads. Kelly, who has served in Congress since 2013, benefited from late ads funded by the Indian American Impact Fund, a group that supports Krishnamoorthi, but aired ads boosting Kelly in an attempt to blunt Stratton in this three-way race.

Stratton emerged victorious in Tuesday’s contest – giving Governor Pritzker a national ally as he potentially contemplates a presidential run in 2028. She will face former Republican Party chair Don Tracy in November. With Illinois solidly established as a blue state, barring something unforeseen, Stratton is on track to become the next U.S. senator from Illinois.

Statewide Constitutional Offices:

Illinois voters will elect all six statewide constitutional offices this year. Democrats currently hold all six constitutional offices in the state of Illinois and are projected to maintain control of them after November’s election. Republicans struggled to field well-known, electable statewide candidates.

Governor Pritzker ran unopposed in Tuesday’s contest. With Lt. Governor Stratton running for the U.S. Senate, Pritzker selected former Deputy Governor Christian Mitchell as his running mate. He will face a rematch against downstate farmer and former legislator Darren Bailey, who secured his party's nomination on Tuesday.

In the race for Secretary of State, little-known candidate Dianne Harris won the Republican nomination and will face incumbent Alexi Giannoulias in November.

Comptroller Susana Mendoza chose not to seek reelection. Four Democrats – Representative Margaret Croke, Senator Karina Villa, Representative Stephanie Kifowit, and Lake County Comptroller Holly Kim - competed to replace her. Croke emerged victorious on Tuesday.

Attorney General Kwame Roul ran unopposed in Tuesday’s primary, as did Treasurer Michael Frerichs.

Congress:

All 17 congressional seats are up for election. Democrats currently hold 14 of Illinois’ 17 congressional seats. There are five open seats in this election cycle; Congresswoman Robin Kelly and Congressman Raja Krishnamoorthi are both running for the US Senate, and three long-time Congressman are retiring: Danny Davis, Jan Schakowsky, and Congressman Jesus “Chuy” Garcia. Garcia initially filed petitions but subsequently withdrew from the race leaving his Chief of Staff -- Patty Garcia --as the lone Democrat on the ballot. These open seats lead to a flurry of candidates filing to succeed by the outgoing members of Congress.

In the 2nd Congressional District, Cook County Commissioner Donna Miller defeated several challengers, including former Congressman Jesse Jackson, Jr., who was seeking a political comeback.

In the crowded race in the 7th Congressional District, State Representative La Shawn Ford (who was endorsed by retiring Congressman Danny Davis) won his party’s nomination Tuesday.

In the 8th Congressional District, former Congresswoman Melissa Bean won the primary. Bean previously lost when the district leaned more Republican.

In the crowded 9th Congressional District race, former State Senator and Evanston Mayor Daniel Biss defeated several challengers, including progressive candidate Kat Abughazaleh and State Senator Laura Fine.

Illinois House of Representatives:

All 118 House seats are up for election this year. There are ten open seats. Seven members are running for higher office: Representative Ford (Congress), Representative Croke (Comptroller), Representative Huynh (Congress), Representative Syed (State Senate), Representative Kifowit (Comptroller), Representative Tipsword (Sheriff), and Representative Jacobs (State Senate). Representatives Smith and Grant are retiring. Representative Moylan filed petitions to run for reelection, but subsequently retired from office, paving the way for his Chief of Staff, Justin Cochran, to run as the only Democrat. Cochran was appointed to replace Moylan. Fifty members are running unopposed. Democrats currently hold a super-majority of the House seats (78 Democrats/40 Republicans).

Democratic Representative Jamie Andrade (40th District) and Republican Deputy Minority Leader Norine Hammond (94th District) lost their primary bids. Andrade was challenged by progressive candidate Miguel Alvelo Rivera, who received significant support from the teachers' unions. Justin Higgins, who was supported by conservative Tom DeVore and the House Freedom Caucus, defeated Hammond on Tuesday.

In the 42nd District, appointed Representative Margaret DeLaRosa won her first primary bid. She replaced Representative Terra Costa Howard who was appointed to a judgeship. In the 52nd District, Maria Peterson won her primary and will face Representative Marty McLaughlin in November. The House Democrats are targeting this race. McLaughlin narrowly won in 2024.

Republican Liz Bishop won the primary in the 76th District. She will face a rematch with first-term Democratic Representative Amy Briel in November.

Three Republican Representatives: Leader Tony McCombie (98th District), Charlie Meier (109th District), and Dave Severin (116th District) all defeated conservative primary challenges. In the 118th District, Republican Scott Doody won the primary to replace Representative Paul Jacobs who is running for the Senate. Doody will face Democrat Chip Markel in November.
